Why these four habits

Small basics with a big effect on energy, focus and mood.

After a season of busyness or self-neglect, start small. Four simple basics, done most days, quietly change how you feel.

☐ Water

GOAL Drink regularly through the day

Many people feel more alert with steady hydration. Eight glasses is a handy everyday reminder; your needs vary with heat, activity and health, so follow your thirst and your doctor's advice.

☐ Sleep

GOAL Aim for 7 to 9 hours

Most adults need 7 to 9 hours. A regular wake-up time, daylight in the morning and a calm last hour before bed help the most.

☐ Vitamins

GOAL Take what you've been advised

If your doctor or pharmacist has recommended a supplement or medication, a tick box makes it easy to remember. No need to add anything new on your own.

☐ Mood

GOAL Notice, don't judge

A quick 1 to 5 rating helps you spot patterns: how sleep, food, movement and people affect the way you feel.

HOW TO MAKE IT STICK

1. Keep it visible. Stick the weekly page on the fridge or inside your planner where you'll see it every day.
2. Track at the same time. Fill it in each evening, or link it to brushing your teeth.
3. Make it easy. A water bottle on your desk, vitamins next to the kettle, a bedtime alarm on your phone.
4. Aim for most days. Missing a day is normal. Just tick the next one. Progress, not perfection.

A gentle note. This tracker is a self-care tool, not medical advice. Talk to a doctor about supplements, sleep problems or low mood that lasts. In a crisis, call or text 988 (US) or your local emergency number.
